From Washington.

From Washington.

The sonate configmed the nomination of Gen. Jo Shelby to be marshal of the western district of Missouri. Quite a little fun was had in the senate over the confirmation. Senator Chandler (rep., of N. H.), opposed confirmation, and brought forward official reports made by Shelby (so said) during the rebellion, showing how Yankees had been slaughtered by Shelby is troops, etc. When that part of one report which speaks of the killing of seventy-five Yankee school-teachers in Arkansas was read. a senator got up and suggested that there was some doubt in his mind about the presence of so many Yankee school-teachers in that state at that period. This raised a general laugh. Senator Manderson (rep., of Neb.) read with gusto the thrilling accounts of Gen. Shelby's victories. Then some one got up with a volume of was records giving the Union reports of the same engagements, putting a very different phase on them. At the marked discrepancies there was more laughter. Senator Vest explained that Gen. Shelby had on his staff a young newspaper man, the late John N. Edwards, who possessed a vivid imagination and remarkable descriptive powers. Maj. Edwards was Gen. Shelby's secretary and wrote the reports. The statements, Senator Vest thought, were not to be taken literally. But the most interesting part of the discussion was reached when Senator Manderson pro ceded to parallel, as it were, the reports of Shelby and those of the Union officers operating against him. On the sum dates when Shelby was slaughtering the Yankees those same Yankees were reporting their efforts to overtake Shelby, who, they said, was running so fast they could not get within sight of him. As these points were made the senators burst into laughter again and again.

The Prosecution of Duestrow.

What will be done with Duestrow? s the question of the hour in St. Louis. Duestrow is the millionaire who killed his wife and child. The ladies of the city have been especially moved by the trazed, and with one voice demand a most vigorous prosecution. Their feeling has taken the form of organiza tion for the collection of a fund with which to retain some eminent criminal lawyer to assist in the prosecution, contributions from ten in the prosecution, contributions from ten cents upward being accepted. The prisoner has secured most eminent counsel, and such are the intricacles of the law that, without desiring in any way to reflect upon the circuit attorney or his assistant, it is felt that they should have the benefit of association with some one of extended experience and acknowledged ability to enable them the more successfully to meet the efforts of Duestrow's attorneys. It is probable that Marshall F. McDonald will be the special counsel chosen. He is perfectly willing to engage in the case, but when seen by a reporter he had heard of no movement toward retaining him, although individual efforts to secure his presence in the case had been made by disinterested persons whom the horror of the tragedy had moved to fear that justice would be thewarted in the end by some to hnicality, or that the defense of in sanity would be successful for want of a proper and intelligent opposition to it.

Mormonism at Independence Another turn in the Mormon Temple lot suit has taken place at Independence.

The announcement created much excitement as the plain meaning of the announcement is that the Utah Mormons will now get a footing in Inde-

| The suit for possession of the Temple lot is now in the United States court, and has been submitted to Judge Phillips for a decision. President Hall was one of the leaders in the bringing of this suit, and the question involved will be, which church now existing is the true successor of the Mormon church as established by Joseph Smith? This declaration of the learned president is one of consternation to the reorganized church of which young Joseph is the head. The Utah people, if they should win the suit, will immediately establish their church in Independence, and as they believe Independence to be their Zion the building of a great temple is to be expected at once.]

IN A BUFFALO'S HEAD. Singular Charge with Which a Hunter Killed a Buil.

The buffalo of Ceylon carries his head in a peculiar manner—the horns thrown back and his nose projecting on a level with his forehead-thus securing him from a fatal front shot. This renders him a dangerous enemy, as he will receive any number of balls from a small gun in the throat and chest without showing the least distress. In "The Rifle and Hound in Ceylon" an account of a dangerous encounter with this animal is given. The writer had fired without killing the buffalo and had not a ball left. With a stealthy step and a short grunt the bull advanced upon the man, seemingly aware of his helplessness. "Suddenly a bright thought flashed through my mind. Without taking my eyes off the animal I put a double charge of powder down the right-hand barrel, and, tearing off a piece of my shirt, I took all the money from my pouch, three shillings in sixpenny pieces and two anna pieces. "Quickly making them into a roll with the piece of a rag, I rammed them down the barrel. They were hardly well home before the bull sprang for ward. I had no time to even replace the ramrod, and threw it in the water bringing my gun on full cock at the same instant. "I now had a charge in my gun which, if reserved till he was within a few feet of the muzzle, would certainly floor him. The horns were lowered, their points were on either side of me. and the muzzle of the gun barely touched his forehead when I pulled the trigger and three shillings' worth of small change rattled into his hard head.

"Down he went and rolled over with the suddenly checked momentum of his charge. Away went B—and I as fast as our heels would carry us, through the water and over the plain. knowing that he was not dead, but

We now experienced the difference of feeling between hunting and being hunted. "By degrees the bull's pace alackened
